inspiratio

We're always looking to innovate. This is so important when in an industry that's so sensitive to trends, where something new is expected over and over again. That's why we develop distinctive and concepts and products that always aim to be one step ahead of trends. We do this in our own Research & Development department, whilst also offering sessions in our test kitchens with our own team and with other leading chefs. The food sector is constantly evolving, but so are we. This has kept us at the forefront of food trends since the company was founded, back in 1886. That's over 130 years of anticipation, creation and inspiration. This is all tied together by making sure we consistently offer the best quality ingredients that begin back at the source. It has made Verstegen what it is today: an active member in every food sector. Be that, retail, fresh distribution, food service, and industry. Based on partnerships and trust, we work closely with our associates on new trends, demands and products. Food safety, sustainability and corporate social responsibility are therefore at the heart of everything we do. This is what Verstegen is all about, and what Verstegen can mean to you.

The colours of Verstegen

Green, red and white. The colours of our logo represent our daily thoughts and actions. Green is the colour of the plants that give us our herbs and spices. It stands for the environment which we respect and depend on. Red is the colour of strength and passion, of committed people who work their hardest for their customers; and of a company whose passion for food leads to new trends and innovations. White is the colour of clarity and honesty. This is how we base our approach to the environment, and to how we work with other people.

"Delivering sustainable quality whilst respecting local traditions."

Nutmeg

The message of our Pure label

The Pure label helps you create incredible flavours in your food, whilst also knowing what's included in the ingredients. If you see the Pure logo on any of our products, they'll contain none of the 14 declarable allergens, no MSG or phosphates, as well as no artificial colours of flavours. The Pure label can be found across all our product range, from single herbs and spices, to Spice Oils, to readymade sauces. If you see the Pure logo, you know what to declare.

When developing our products, we always strive to use the purest ingredients and blends possible. This creates the authentic flavours that you'd expect. But sometimes, using one of the declarable allergens is unavoidable. After all, what would Oriental Sesame Sauce be without sesame seeds? The Pure label helps keep all users informed, from the chef, to the customers. With new legislation on food labelling, Verstegen can help you keep your cooking as clean as possible.

CSR & Verstegen

As a part of Verstegen's commitment to sustainability, we take part in projects that aid and support local farmers as they grow their herbs and spices. Local farmers like Abdul Rajab Asawala from Indonesia. He grows nutmeg on his land near the village of Hila. A true professional, Abdul tends to some 140 nutmeg trees. He grows and harvests his nutmeg with great care and then sells into the nutmeg company within his village. Verstegen is one of the company's most loyal customers. In this way, we always look to increase opportunities for farmers like Abdul.

Herbs & Spices

Herbs and spices are what give dishes their unique, delicious taste and smell. Herbs and spices owe their flavours and aromas to the volatile oils they contain, which in turn are dependent on the soil and climate in which they grow. What is the big difference between herbs and spices and how can we do justice to them?

Herbs & Spices

The difference between herbs and spices

Herbs and spices are often mentioned in the same breath when it comes to adding flavour to dishes. Nevertheless, they are not the same thing. The most important difference is that herbs are often green, soft plants, or parts of plants, obtained primarily from Mediterranean countries. Spices are the harder parts of plants and trees, such as roots, seeds, stalks and bark. These plants and trees are primarily found in countries with tropical or subtropical climates.

Herbs

Parsley

Using herbs

In order to get herbs to really give their flavour, you must choose the right moment to add them to your dish, and that in turn depends on the type of herb being used. Herbs with hard leaves such as thyme, bay, sage and rosemary need time and heat to release their flavour. For this reason, it is best to add them at the start of the cooking process. Herbs with soft leaves, such as parsley, chives, coriander, tarragon, dill and basil release their flavour quickly and are usually added at the end of the cooking process, or just before serving.

The benefits of freeze-drying

Naturally, the wonderful flavour and aroma of fresh herbs must be preserved for as long as possible. One of the ways to achieve this is by freeze-drying, which involves drying herbs at low temperatures so that the volatile oils, colour, structure and flavour are far better preserved. As such, freeze-dried herbs are often stronger in flavour than fresh, which means you need to use less of them. When freeze-dried herbs come back into contact with moisture, they simply revert to their fresh characteristics.

Spices

Using spices

The use of spices is dependent on the type of spice you are using in your dish. The best flavour from whole spices is obtained by grinding or crushing the spices shortly before use. Whole spices are also sometimes fried in oil. This can be at the start of a recipe, before adding the other ingredients or purely to flavour the oil. Some spices, such as saffron, are first soaked in a hot liquid before use. This releases the flavour and aroma to best effect.

The grinding process

Verstegen grinds the herbs and spices in its factory in Rotterdam. During the grinding process, ethereal oils are released – in other words, the flavour. When you have everything ground in the country of origin, you can never be certain whether the process is being done properly. What's more, the ethereal oils are sensitive to the effects of heat and shipping. Grinding is an expert technique that Verstegen prefers to keep in-house. By doing all of the grinding ourselves, we can guarantee a consistently high quality. That's the advantage of 130 years' experience: after all that time, we know exactly what it takes to achieve the very best flavours and aromas.

Pepper & Salt

Whether you want to enrich or highlight a flavour, or even add an element of contrast to your dish, pepper is the perfect spice for the job. That's precisely why quality is so important when it comes to pepper. Pepper is available in a wide range of qualities. At Verstegen, only the very finest will do.

"The most flavourful peppers and an amazing assortment of salts and salt alternatives."

Pepper white muntok

Here it is used primarily for seasoning fish dishes and

Pepper white muntok

pepper The most well-known types of pepper are green, black and white pepper.

White, green and black

They all come from the same plant; the difference is found in the harvesting of the plants. Unlike black and green peppercorns, with white pepper the berry has been allowed to grow and ripen fully. These berries are soaked in running water for up to twelve days. The skin of each berry is then washed off, revealing the pale peppercorn within: white pepper. Green peppercorns are the unripe berries. If you allow a slightly riper pepper berry to dry under careful conditions, you get black pepper. Black pepper is sharper in taste, whereas white pepper has a warmer, fuller flavour.

The origin of pepper

Did you know that the flavour of pepper, just like wine, is determined by climatic conditions and soil chemistry? The ideal conditions are: a temperature of 28 °C, a hilly landscape and not too much rain. That's why much of the world's pepper is produced in Indonesia, India, Malaysia, Brazil and Vietnam. Verstegen's white pepper, for example, comes from the island of Bangka near Sumatra. It's interesting to note that white pepper is popular mainly in Europe. light-coloured sauces.

Positive Picking

Various grades of quality exist for white pepper. The quality is chiefly determined by the number of dark peppercorns remaining in the mix. Through 'Positive Picking', Verstegen selects the very finest pepper. This means that only those berries that meet the strictest standards of quality are plucked from the harvested mixture for use.

Cacao, Fruit and Season Peppers

Cacao, Fruit and Season Peppers are all balanced mixes based on combinations of speciality pepper varieties such as Maniquette and Szechuan, but with additional special ingredients. In the case of Cacao Peppers, that ingredient is high-quality cocoa. For Fruit Peppers, we have combined the peppers with dried pieces of quality fruit, and for Season Peppers we have used vegetables and Aonori or Wakamé seaweed to enhance the delicious flavours.

A brief guide to salt

While pepper is a spice, salt is not: it's a mineral. One that has been in use since the dawn of civilisation. There are various kinds of salt. We can divide them into three categories – sea salt, rock salt and vacuum salt – on the basis of how the salt is obtained. Sea salt. as its name implies, comes from the sea; rock salt and vacuum salt are mined from the earth.

Gomasio, the healthy flavour enhancer from Japan

Inspired by the desire for products containing less salt, we looked at the healthiest and longest-living population in the world: the Japanese. The result? Gomasio, a series of products to perfectly flavour your dishes, but using less salt. Gomasio contains 90% 'Goma', Japanese for sesame seed, and just 10% 'Sio', or sea salt, it is proof that healthy food can be really tasty too.

Welcome to Asian cuisine, the cuisine that centres on the richness of flavours, aromas, colours and experience. It is one of the most flavoursome and colourful cuisines in the world, and generally speaking, the dishes are rich in plant-based nutrition and contain little fat, whilst incorporating lots of fruit and vegetables.

We offer an extensive range of Asian products for the professional kitchen. Our Kumar's branded curry, bumbu and wokpastes are prepared using only the finest quality fresh herbs and spices. The use of these fresh ingredients such as galangal, coriander, curry leaves and chilli, teamed with traditional production methods, offer the essential characteristics that mark the original taste of south Asian cuisine.

Curries and bumbus

Curry connoisseurs will immediately recognise and appreciate the authentic taste and balance of complex flavours, and rest assured that with the Kumar's range you are adding true Asian flavour and passion to your dishes.

Wokpaste

Kumar's wokpaste are based on herbs and spices and aromatise the individual ingredients without covering up their original tastes. The vegetables stay fresh and crispy. The sauces allure with their scent and their complex blend of aromas. Here in particular you can see how diverse the "Kumar Products" range is. Chinese hoisin sauce, Japanese teriyaki sauce or sweet and sour sauce wok pastes create desirable flavour profiles, which can be used in many ways. Vegetarian, fish, poultry or meat: You have the choice.
